Hello loyal readers. A ton of spooky story happened this week and I'm here to inform you of all the most important stories Beyond The Facts.

Yard sale makes no sales.

A yard sale in West Virginia, Appalachia reportedly made no sales. In an interview with the old couple who created the yard sale, they said with immense disappointment "The yard sale was a disaster. No one bought anything. We think it had to do with the complete lack of advertising or Millennials lack of willingness to go outside and contribute to their community. Millennials are so useless. You know back in my day-" I was forced to leave after the old couple got worked up over Millenials and started throwing things.

Walmart Prepares for black Friday

The Walmarts PR team has recently released a report detailing all the special events happening this black Friday. Walmart will reportedly provide all shoppers with free box cutters for “faster access to newly bought items.” They will also remove all security to “make room for more shoppers.” they will also mop the floors five minutes before the doors open for “A nice Christmas shine.”

World's youngest person born.

A child by the name of Jamie Michel has recently become the youngest person ever born. I was unable to interview him since he didn't speak English. In an interview, his parents stated that this was his “greatest achievement” however they were worried that It “might not last very long.”
